+ Description

This walk takes you through a haven of peace and quiet around one of the mythical peaks of the Bruche valley. Surrounded by green and wooded landscapes, the Climont is the water tower of the region. Three rivers are born around it: Bruche, Giessen and Fave. The Bruche has its source at an altitude of 690 m. This place is marked by a stele realized by the sculptor Raymond Keller, from a sandstone block offered by the quarry of Champenay.
The Bruche then crosses a vast sunny basin, the clearing of Hang.
