+ Description

Rosheim is a beautiful Alsatian town located on the Wine Route and the Romanesque Road with an especially rich history, to which its architectural heritage proudly bears witness. The town is proud to possess one of the oldest civilian buildings in Alsace, the Romanesque House, also called the Pagan House (1154). St Pierre and St Paul Church (12th century) is also one of the region's jewels of Romanesque architecture. The old doors, Six-Bucket Well and Town Hall are other testaments to the town's rich past. To finish off your visit, you can enjoy the local delicacies and gastronomic specialities during the numerous summer and winter events.
