Description

To mark the release of the film 'Le Secret du Loup d'Ethiopie' by Baptiste Deturche and Adrien Lesaffre, your Obernai cinema invites you to meet director Baptiste Deturche!

On the African continent, in Ethiopia, there is a region where the earth has risen to an altitude of over 3600m. Up there is a plateau known as Abyssinia. And on these heights lives the rarest species of canid in the world: the Ethiopian Wolf. Following in the footsteps of a photographer committed to the preservation of this species, we set off to meet this high-altitude world where the last wolves live. In addition to being rare, having evolved far from its canid cousins and in an isolated environment, this wolf adopts a novel and rarely filmed behavior: it forages for flowers! Driven by the passion of Adrien Lesaffre, the photographer, we discover a discreet, intimate world and the necessary work of photographic documentation for conservation.
